Would Also Have Another
Unit Erected at Coatesville
Hospital

ELECT SMITH AS HEAD

Resolution Calls for Limiting Speakers at Conventions So
As To Shorten Sessions

YORK, Aug. 21.—A recommendation that a new veterans' hospital, with accommodations for 500 patients, be erected immediately in Philadelphia, was among the resolutions passed at the convention of the State Department, American Legion.

William F. Smith, Punxsutawney coal broker, was elected Department commander for the coming year, winning a spirited contest from Charles Cook, West Pittston, a State Motor policeman.

Frank G. Gwynn, of Allentown, was named Eastern vice-commander without opposition. J. G. Guest of Plymouth took the vice-commandership of the Central district, and that in the West went to Silas A. Waddell, of Pittsburgh. Rev. Francis X. McGee, of Bedford, was elected Department chaplain.

Other resolutions among the 11 reported out recommended the erection of another unit at the Coatesville State Hospital, also with 500 beds, and the addition of 125 beds to the facilities at Aspinwall Hospital, near Pittsburgh. That the number of speakers at subsequent department conventions be limited, to shorten the sessions and facilitate the transaction of business. That the department request a financial statement from the National Legion organization to be published in the National Legionnaire and copies sent to all posts.

That the convention go on record as opposed to any upper age limits for workers in business and industry, and request Chambers of Commerce and similar organizations to adopt measures to eliminate such discrimination against employees past the age of 45. That the department request the enactment of legislation so that interest paid by veterans on loans from the Veterans' Administration for rehabilitation purposes will be repaid.

That the department issue an invitation to General John J. Pershing to attend the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, and that the occasion of his visit be designated as "ex-servicemen's day."

That all applicants for assistance from the National Rehabilitation Committee be required to have the endorsement of the officers of their local post.

That the department seek assistance in the maintenance of historic spots, including restoration of Washington's headquarters at Brandywine. That the department endorse a house bill providing for an increase of the Dental Corps of the U. S. Army.

That the Legion adopt as wards, for educational purposes, the orphans of deceased veterans.

That the department extend an expression of its appreciation to the York Convention Corporation and others who have contributed to the convention's success.

That the department, with that of New Jersey, ask the abolition of the so-called "basic quota" as a means of determining the parade positions and hotel accommodations for departments at national conventions, on the ground that the quota system works injustice to the larger departments, whose membership reports cannot be completed early enough to give them a proper quota rating.

Meeting at their headquarters at Christ Lutheran Church, the department auxiliary elected officers for 1938.

For president they chose Mrs. C. V. Homer, of Greenville. Sectional vice-presidents are: Mrs. Paul Sine, of Perkaskie, Eastern; Mrs. Fred Hamilton, of Galtion, Central; and Mrs. Arthur Beaver, of Dravosburg, Western.

Others elected were: Mrs. C. W. Dressler, of Pittsburgh, executive secretary-treasurer; Mrs. A. L. Kresge, of Forty-Fort, recording secretary; Mrs. Mabel Stark, of Pittston, chaplain; and Mrs. Matthew C. Watson, of Indiana, historian.

Mrs. Clayton Stauffer, of Trumbauersville, had the thrill of her life, recently, in the Gulf of Mexico, when she landed this 7-foot, 112-pound sailfish after a battle of one hour and thirty-five minutes. The Stauffers have just returned from a visit to Miami and Tampa.

The motor crash that took the life of Horace Hager, eighteen-year-old Lansdale athlete, was declared an unavoidable accident at an inquest held by Coroner H. Clayton Moyer, of Bucks County.

The inquest was held in the office of Magistrate W. Carlile Hobensack, at Doylestown. Evidence presented appeared to indicate that a combination of circumstances involving the blinding effect of an approaching car's headlights, and the victim standing in the way of his own car's tail-light, caused the accident.

Young Hager was fatally injured.

After a lot of false starts and futile negotiations by the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board, a lease has at last been signed for a new store being erected on South Main street, next to Town Hall, New Hope. Ground was broken last week, and occupancy is promised for the Liquor Store on September 15. It is understood the lease calls for a monthly rental of $60.

Summon Ambassador Bingham

London, Aug. 21.—Gravity of the Far Eastern situation today caused President Roosevelt to summon Ambassador Robert W. Bingham to Washington in one of the fastest trips the diplomat has ever made.

Bingham cancelled a week-end visit to Scotland, hastened to Southampton and boarded the Empress of Britain, which sailed today.

The Situation in China

Guns of American warships in the Whangpoo were stripped for trigger action against any perpetrators or repetition of the August 20 shelling today, while Chinese and Japanese artillery guns, ignoring the stern American warning, resumed shelling of the flaming city. Developments:

1. United States warships held at anchor while a board of inquiry seeks to find responsible country for the killing of an American sailor. Admiral Yarnell warned that other offenders lay open to retaliatory firing.

2. A two mile square area of eastern Shanghai was in flames and spreading rapidly. Japanese troops in a counter offensive pushed Chinese forces back in the international settlement.

3. Consular Hidaka of the now closed Japanese embassy at Nanking charged that China "may invade the intervention of a third power."

4. Ambassador Bingham was suddenly recalled from London to discuss the Far Eastern situation with President Roosevelt.

REPORT SLIGHT GAIN IN NUMBER ON RELIEF

At Week Ending August 7th
There Were 297 Cases, or
1,208 People Getting Aid

AN INCREASE OF 6 CASES

The changes in the direct relief rolls in Bucks County during the week ending August 7, resulted in a slight gain in the total load. At the end of the week there were 297 cases, consisting of 1,208 persons, carried on the rolls, as compared with a total of 291 cases, or 1,190 persons, at the end of the previous week. This represented a net weekly increase of six cases, or 18 persons. It may be noted, that no definite trend in the case load has been observed over the past two months, and one week of increase has been followed by a week of decline.

An analysis of the total expenditures for direct relief grants showed that a total of $2,455.30 was expended for this purpose during the last week in July. This figure is somewhat greater than the weekly expenditures recorded during previous weeks and the increase in these costs is directly related to the larger number of cases carried on the direct relief rolls. The average weekly grant per case has shown little fluctuation, however, and amounts to approximately $8.44 a week per case.

The average number of persons per case shown for the current week amounted to 4.1 and was the same as shown for the previous week.

The stability of this figure may be attributed to the fact that the cases added to the relief rolls and the cases removed from the relief rolls averaged approximately the same number of persons per case.

The number of cases opened for relief this week showed a decrease over the previous week, dropping from 29 cases opened last week to 14 cases approved for relief during the current week. It is noted, that private employment accounted for most of the changes reflected in the relief rolls this week. The number of closings continued to remain at a very low figure amounting to only eight cases this week and 14 cases for the previous week. This low volume of the closings stands in contrast to the larger number of closings shown during earlier months when the case load was declining at a somewhat rapid rate. The changes in seasonal employment conditions, notably shown at this time of the year, are undoubtedly related to the small volume of closings.

A total of 18 applications were received for direct relief this week which was slightly smaller than the figure shown a week ago. The number of applications from former direct relief cases amounted to only five. Despite the current reduction in quotas throughout the State on W. P. A. projects, applications for direct relief received from former W. P. A. cases continued to remain at a very low figure, accounting for only one such application this week.

Concerning the number of new applications received for relief, it is noted that this figure has shown a rather sharp increase recently, with a total of 31 such applications received during the past three weeks. This is very striking when it is observed that this figure is larger than the total number of new applications received during the six weeks previous to the middle of July. This sharp increase in the number of new families applying for direct relief is related to the industrial conditions existing here at the present time and is evidenced by the fact that 14 new cases have been added to the relief rolls during the past few weeks due to strikes in private industry.

It was observed that there were nine boroughs and two townships in which there were no cases carried on the relief rolls last week. These localities are:

Boroughs: Chalfont, Dublin, Hulmeville, Langhorne Manor, New Britain, Newtown, Neigelsville, Silverdale and Telford. Townships: Bridgeton, and Newtown.

BLAZING OIL FLOWS INTO DITCHES AFTER LIGHTNING HITS TANK

1,750,000 Gallons of Crude Oil Go Up in Flames At New Hope

TWO TANKS ARE HIT

Retaining Ditches Keep The Flames Under Control As Firemen Protect Other Tanks

NEW HOPE, Aug. 21.—Lightning fired two crude oil tanks here last evening during a heavy electrical storm. The two tanks contained about 1,750,000 gallons of crude oil which flowed into open retaining ditches and burst into flames. The tanks located were at the pumping station of the National Transit Company, Center Bridge, three miles north of here. No one was injured.

The bolt of lightning split the tanks and the oil bubbled over the top of the tanks, poured slowly down the side, spreading a flaming lake for a radius of 100 feet along the ground. Flames rose and fell in spurts, shooting 200 feet into the air at times. A thick black oily smoke covered the area and spectators were attracted for miles to the scene.

The two tanks had a capacity of 2,900,000 gallons. The loss is $110,000.

Located at the end of a row of 12, the two storage tanks were split by the force of the bolt and their contents spilled into retaining trenches. The oil immediately burst into flames, but was prevented from spreading to adjoining containers by the ditches.

At a late hour last night, company employees and three fire departments were still fighting the flames. The blaze was extinguished at 2 a. m. today. Company officials said that the fire would have to burn itself out, and efforts were confined to playing water on the remaining 10 tanks to prevent heating.

Frank Ditto, superintendent, was unable to estimate the amount of damage. Tanks in the vicinity contained gasoline belonging to the Tuscarora Pipe Line Company.

For several hours after the lightning struck, thick smoke arising from the fire was plainly visible for several miles. New Hope, Lambertville and Stockton fire companies sent apparatus to the scene.

Prior to the oil fire, Lambertville apparatus responded to an alarm at the farm of Mrs. Ethel Wallace, on Sugar Road, where barns and buildings were destroyed after being struck by lightning.

Several telegraph poles in Lambertville were hit but no fire resulted. Telephone wires in the vicinity of the Alexander bridge were also damaged by the storm, and fuses were blown out in a number of homes.

State Motor Police blocked the River Road, which passes the tanks, to all traffic and drew a fire line about the tanks. No one was permitted to approach closer than 1000 feet. Occupants of nearby cottages were ordered to leave. Those who hurried out included many widely known artists.

BEDS, SOFT AND HARD

Scientists have come to the conclusion through laboratory tests that for the brain worker six hours sleep on a downy couch is better than eight hours on a hard pallet. A hard bed in eight hours builds less energy than a soft bed can in six hours.

The tests also tend to show that the brain works more efficiently but utilizes more energy if two hours are cut from the normal sleep period. In the light of the discovered relation of sleep bed to the number of hours of sleep one requires, it is presumed that a soft bed was used to make the latter test.

Perhaps the professors are right in their deductions, but the laity will have difficulty in reconciling these scientific discoveries with the fact everybody has learned by "hard" experience that those accustomed to a hard bed find as great if not greater difficulty in adapting themselves to yielding spring and downy mattress than those born to a soft bed find in habituating themselves to a hard couch.

Who has not returned to his own soft bed after many nights sound slumber on the body-bruising ground or strange unyielding beds and awakened the next morning feeling physically sore and mentally weary all because of being unaccustomed to a soft place to sleep?

LOVE TRAGEDIES

Love is said to be the greatest thing in the world, but when this grand passion goes wrong, it leaves a terrible wake of tragedy behind. So we read of jealous people who commit fearful deeds to avenge their supposed wrongs, of people who end their own lives to put themselves out of love torments, of pathetic folks who go into a physical decline because of disappointment in love.

When marriage occurs and one of the wedded pair conceives a fatal passion for some third person, a home is broken up, and the lives of children in many cases are wrecked.

But when love runs smooth, it is the basis for happy homes, the laughter of children, a sound and sensible combination that gives us solace in hours of sorrow and provides for our daily needs.

What can be said to those for whom it does not run smooth, who somehow have missed its true meaning, and who think this passion is a fatal wound in their hearts? Well, they say that time cures all wounds. Immense people have felt they were going to die of disappointed love.

People should not get so desperate about their love disappointments. The old saying has it that there are just as good fish in the sea as those that have been caught.

One of the newer, streamlined trailers will hold four sleepers, or six if they have retracting foreheads.

If one half doesn't know the way the other half lives, it will when the tax bill comes in.

A girl is funny. She would be ashamed to marry the fellow, yet she feels proud because he asked her.

In Arkansas, a motorist who used the same set of license plates since 1912 has just been caught, which spoiled a silver anniversary.

But why think Junior doomed if you were a young hellion and turned out so well.

"THE CRUISE TO NOWHERE"

by JERRY FROSCHER

SYNOPSIS

Sidney Hart, wealthy publisher, is murdered aboard the yacht, "Carmen," owned by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Montgomery-Glass. The captain is also killed. Aboard at the time are Mrs. Glass, her son, Archie Montgomery; Paul Dupont, her lawyer; and four of Hart's employees who were shanghaied through error, the crew puts Chapin in Archie's room where he finds Hart's will and a letter to Archie from Grace reading: "I am afraid something drastic will have to be done before your grandfather approves of our engagement." Archie orders Chapin to his own cabin and locks him in. Chapin reads the will and learns that Hart left a million dollars each to Mrs. Glass, Archie, and Paul Dupont. In the will is a newspaper account of the sudden death of Anthony Montgomery aboard his yacht, "Carmen," while on a world cruise with his son, Archie, and the burial in mid-Pacific. The clipping also states that Montgomery was divorced from his wife and that all his estate was left to his son. Chapin suspects Archie of the crime and believes Grace is his accomplice. Dupont, followed by one of the crew carrying a tray, calls on Chapin to get his theory of the killings, but Chapin says what he thinks "would not hold water."

CHAPTER VII

When he had gone, Chapin looked at the food spread out on the tray. He did not feel particularly hungry, and it occurred to him that Mr. Hart and the captain were probably poisoned by something that had been put in food, and that according to his own theory, there were dubious indications of further crimes. He sniffed at each portion of food. He thought that there was a peculiar odor about the salad, and pushed it aside. The potato had been baked, and the skin unbroken. He pried it open, and nibbled at the faint tap on the window startled him. He turned, quickly, and drew back in alarm, at the sight of a face pressed closely against the darkly shadowed glass.

Chapin's immediate reaction was that someone was spying upon him, and had inadvertently made a sound on the window-pane. Then, as he stared the features of the little jockey became clear, and with a sense of relief, he saw that Ryder was motioning him to open the window.

He raised it with the least possible sound, and Ryder whispered: "I'm coming in."

He scrambled up to the ledge, squeezed through the narrow opening, and dropped into the room. Chapin eased the window down.

"Lucky I'm small," Ryder breathed. "I was lonesome! I hadn't have somebody to talk to, so I did a scam out my window. Say, do you think they are going to pinch us?"

"Sit down," Chapin said, and the tray happened to catch his attention. "If that black comes for this, you'd better duck under the bed."

"You didn't eat much," Ryder observed.

"Wasn't hungry."

"I was. I'm near at the plates, and the con was right back after my tray."

"See here, Ryder, I'm going to ask you a few questions," he said tentatively. "By the way Hampton and I were grabbed, it looks as though we were to die of disappointed love."

"Sure does!" the little jockey's eyes were bulging with suspense.

"Whatever you may think, my story of being shanghaied was true. Was you?"

"I hope to die this minute, if every word wasn't the gospel truth," he proclaimed, earnestly.

"You had known Mr. Hart for quite a few years, is that right?" the jockey asked.

"Had been mentioned to you that he planned to make a cruise on this ship?"

"Nope. Say, you gonna play Sherlock Holmes?"

Chapin smiled. "Somebody has to."

"And I'm goin' ter be Watson. Okey, Sherlock, shoot the works."

"Did anyone ever tell you that Mr. Hart had mentioned you in his will?"

"Who, me?" Ryder gulped, in astonishment. "Geek! No. The old boy was always after me not ter be too reckless spendin' me dough. Said I was livin' too wild. Of course, I been wild-drinkin' and chasin' after the skirts. But I promised the old man a month or two ago, that I'd cut it out. So, I went an' took the pledge. I ain't even had a mouthful of ginger ale, since."

Chapin laughed softly, and reflected that the date on the copy of the will was fairly recent.

"Did you ever see this fellow, Archie Montgomery, before?"

"Yeah! I think I seen him a couple times at the races with the old girl."

"Did you ever talk with him?"

"Mebbe said somethin' or other."

"That's ridiculous! He couldn't have thrown the bodies overboard single-handed. And when did he have an opportunity? The only time we were separated was when we all went to change our clothes. He couldn't have managed it, even with help in broad daylight, without someone seeing him. Did Archie give any details?"

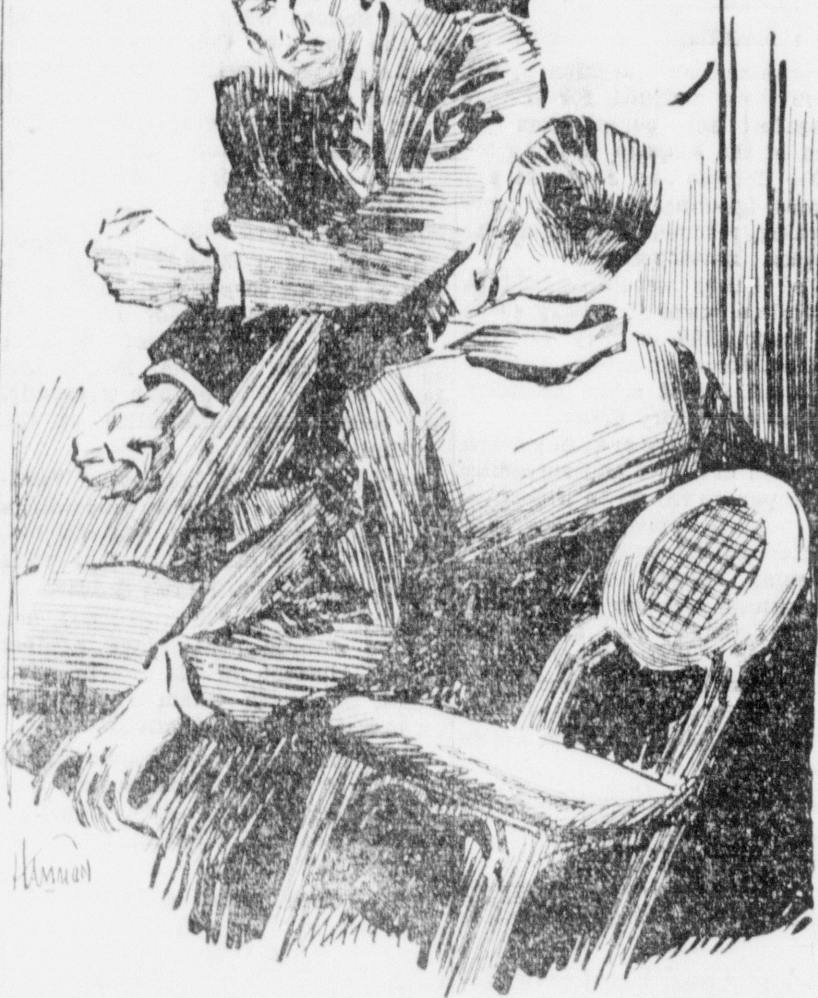

"Nope. He kept sayin' that he didn't see how Hampton did it."

"He didn't!" Chapin scoffed, and after a minute, asked: "Any sight of land over on the port side?"

"Yeah! I never thought of that. We oughter be gettin' in soon, at that. I wonder—"

"Hush!" Chapin warned, "and crawl under the bed."

A key clicked as Ryder disappeared under the bed.

about the way the bets was runnin'."

"But you are not sure?"

"It's like this. Mr. Hart uster bring people out, new and then, I was thinkin' awhile back, that this here Archie and his ma was with him sometimes. Most generally, the folks that was with Mr. Hart uster kid me about this horse, Rancoon, 'cause I'm nuts on that horse. Gee! I was supposed to be out at the stables this mornin'. They cut out, 'n' I was in New York, yer know, an' Rancoon has ter be shipped south."

"What was you sayin' about that there will? Did I think he'd left me a chunk?"

"That's it."

"Gee! I could sure use five grand, all right."

"And still keep the pledge?"

"Sure, that'd be easy now. My will out's has all been sunk under six feet."

"What would you do with a lot of money?"

"Me? I'd build pop and mum a place in the country, so they could raise chickens an' ducks an' things. He eyed Chapin speculatively, and added: "Who was tellin' yer the grand news?"

"I am not at liberty to say, just now," Chapin answered, and changed the subject. "Did you come straight here from your room, or did you look in on Hampton?"

"Gosh! I forgot to tell yer the news! Hampton busted out. My room is right next to his, on the other side of the deck, an' while before Dupont led the way in with my tray of grub, I heard a lot of bangin' round next door, an' the first thing I knew, I seen Hampton runnin' pell mell past my window."

"Did they catch him?"

"I ain't sure. Oh, an' say, another thing, after I did a scam out the window, I heard voices in that lounge room, an' I ducked down there an' listened under the window. Archie was in there, tellin' his mother that Hampton had chucked the bodies overboard, so ez not to be complicated with any blame for poisonin' 'em."

peared under the bed. The Maori who had brought the tray entered, Archie was right behind him. The latter looked cross and uneasy.

"See here, Chapin," he began, crisply. "You monkeyed in my desk when you were in Room G. You took some papers that belong to me. I want 'em."

The Maori picked up the tray and left the room, noiselessly.

Chapin grinned, slyly. "How many questions are you willing to answer, in order to get those papers back?"

Archie flushed angrily. "I'm not answering any questions. I'm getting those papers."

The door knob turned with the faintest squeak, and Chapin jumped to his feet. He suspected that Archie had given the Maori orders to leave the tray somewhere and return. Dreaded another scuffle, and with nerves tensed watched the door open inch by inch.

Dick Hampton stepped into the room, and as he slammed the door with one hand the other gripped Archie's coat collar and jerked that surprised young man backward. Then Hampton's left fist shot out and crashed Archie's jaw. He stumbled over a chair and fell in a heap on the floor, his head striking the bed post.

Hampton yanked a piece of rope from his pocket and seized Archie's feet. "Hold his hands there, Chapin," he ordered.

Chapin, with grim amusement, obeyed the order. Hampton knotted the rope around the ankles and severed the dangling end with a pocket knife, and made swift work of tying the hands together.

Archie whimpered and squirmed and cursed.

"Want me to sit on his stomach?" a voice squeaked gleefully, and Ryder crawled from under the bed.

"So you're here," Hampton said. "You might help Chapin and me lift him onto a chair. I mean to have a few words with this guy."

CHAPTER VIII

He jerked Archie roughly by one arm. Chapin took the other, Ryder caught him about the knees, and altogether they pulled him into a chair.

"What is the meaning of this? You crooks!" Archie puffed belligerently.

"I'll tell you," Hampton bland. "We're not even in sight of land. We're not even headed for New York. Your mother claims that she lost the sextant and can't get her bearings. If anybody stole the thing—you did. And when I let you out of this room you are going up on that bridge, and I'm going to tie you there and torture you until you think of a way to get back to New York."

Archie sneered: "You'd have to fight six husky blacks first, and there's Dupont and my mother to consider."

"Don't I know that you are double-crossing your mother—you big bum!" Hampton rapped back.

"Gee!" murmured the little jockey, admiringly. "We got a regular sheriff with us."

"Wait a minute," Chapin interrupted the irascible Hampton. "Before we get into an argument, what's your plan?"

"Come into the bathroom, where this swine can't hear us. And you, Ryder, stand guard. We'll let you in or let you out—little boy."

On Ryder winked. "Okey, Sheriff!"

In the bathroom, with the door closed, Hampton said: "I've been wanting to have a pow-wow with you. When we scattered to get dressed before lunch, I took a sneak downstairs. I knew Mrs. Glass would be on the bridge, and I wanted to get a squirt at the mate, off duty."

Also wanted to see what the engineer looked like, if any. I didn't have to go far when I heard voices. A couple of men were having a chat, and, believe it or not, they were talking in English and they sounded as mad as blazes. They were talking at first about the captain's death. It didn't take me long to discover that they were the very men I was hoping to find. The mate and the engineer. One of them wanted to go have a little talk with this mate and engineer. Think they are down below now?"

"We can look. What will we do with Archie?"

"Leave him here. I think we can trust Ryder to watch him until we get back. You don't happen to know where Dupont is, do you?"

"I don't. But it's dark. I think we should be able to evade him. Come on," Hampton opened the door, and said to Ryder, with a wink, "We're taking a stroll around the deck for exercise. Be back in a few minutes. Hold everything while we are gone."

"You bet!" the little jockey winked back and, to show his nerve, punched Archie on the jaw.

"Don't be brutal," Hampton cautioned lightly.

"What do you think of Ryder?"

navigate very well, and because she has lost the sextant she can't get her bearings. She won't trust the mate up there for more than an hour or two, and just as he gets the yacht headed toward land she comes back and flops it about in the other direction.

"They talked about some project on a place called Dsawn Island that Archie has up his sleeve. One of them argued that the captain was the only one beside the 'master mind' who had known all the details. They cursed about 'extra people' being put on board, and one of them said that the captain objected to this."

I also learned that just before the "Carmen" put up steam last night the captain and Archie and Mr. Hart had a drink together, and Archie and the old man had an argument."

"Did they say anything about disposing of the bodies?" Chapin asked.

"No. They wouldn't be apt to have had anything to do with that. I have an idea that whoever disposed of the bodies threw them overboard just about the time that I was down there listening-in. Everyone was supposed to be busy changing their clothes about that time."

Chapin decided that it would be unwise to mention the fact that anyone suspected him of being a guinea party. He had no wish to excite Hampton's temper to a further pitch.

"Later, when I was locked in the stateroom," Hampton was saying, "I had plenty of time to think, and I decided that at the first opportunity I would talk the matter over with you, and if you agree we'll help these two guys start a mutiny. I didn't like the idea of being shut up and not knowing what was going on, so when Dupont came strolling in with his lordly manner, behind the black with the tray, I socked him one on

NEW ADMISSION PRICE AT LANDRETH BALL PARK

A new low price of admission to ball games played at Landreth Ball Park is announced today by Manager David Landreth. The new price will prevail for the balance of the season, says Mr. Landreth. The admission, beginning tomorrow afternoon when the Landreth Seeds will play R. D. Wood is 25 cents for any seat in the grounds.

With the new low price of admission prevailing Mr. Landreth states that 25 cents will entitle the purchaser of a ticket to a nice cool seat in the covered stands, right behind the catcher, or along the base lines if preferred.

Bartolo or Carey will pitch for the R. D. Wood nine of Florence, N. J., while Black or Ashby will toss them up for the "Farmers."

The series between the "Farmers" and R. D. Wood is tied at one game each, so there should be a lively game tomorrow afternoon at the Landreth Ball Park.

The Landreth Park should be crowded tomorrow afternoon with the low price of admission which is to be charged, only 25 cents to any seat in the park.

Odd Fellows	0	2	000

Tomorrow afternoon will be "Henry" Morgan's turn to attempt to blank the Odd Fellows. The diminutive Hibernian twirler will try to emulate Gallagher and Ennis in the third game of the play-off series which will be played on the Edgely diamond tomorrow afternoon, beginning at three o'clock.

Morgan has been an in-and-out for the Hibs this season. At times he pitched brilliantly, while on other occasions he was battered from the mound. His hill opponent will most likely be Hal Snyder, former pitcher for the Hibs. Snyder hasn't twirled in the series as yet.

The Hibs will be weakened by the loss of their captain, "Eddie" Roe, who was injured in the opening tilt of the series. The Odd Fellows will possess their full strength for the game and are out to prolong the series.

The largest crowd of the series is expected to witness what may be the final Bristol Twilight League game of the year.

SINDORA EAGER TO GIVE KAYO TO HERBIE SPENCER

Fresh from a triumph scored in Philadelphia, Thursday night, Sammy Sindora, up-coming St. Ann's battler, has been booked a bout for the weekly amateur boxing show sponsored in the outdoor arena of St. Ann's Athletic Association. Sindora's foe for Monday night will be Herbie Spencer, Sigma Theta warrior.

Sindora fought at Passon field on the above-mentioned night and defeated none other than Carl Manchini, former title holder of the A. A. U. 147-lb. division. Manchini won the first round by a slight margin but received a real shellacking from the Bristolian in the final two sessions. There was no doubt as to the winner at the close of the bout.

Match-maker Sammy Moffo has booked a bout for Sylvester Purnell. Purnell will meet William Floyd, Arena, Floyd was to have fought Purnell several weeks ago but could not appear because of an error in the latter's schedule. Floyd and Purnell are evenly matched and both have practically the same number of bouts. Purnell is out to begin a new winning streak, his last having been broken by George Huey, Willow Grove, last Monday night.

Along with these two, Johnny Racagnone will be matched with William Desmond. Racagnone fought his comeback fight Thursday night against William Bunkley, Sigma Theta, and was awarded the bout on a technical knockout in the first round. Racagnone had his foe bleeding from the nose and mouth and in a helpless condition before the referee intervened.

Tally Sciarra was robbed of a decision against George Lyons in the Passon show. Sciarra battered Lyons with everything but the rink posts but still the decision went against him. The spectators howled and booed for fully five minutes after the decision was announced.

Tickets for the show can be had by phoning the St. Ann's club-house, 9934.

Hibernians vs. Odd Fellows

—O—

On Sunday the Oddies and Hiboes meet! For the local ball fans, what a treat! In the play-off for the Twilight flag. It appears to be in the Hiboes' bat-bag. However, the Oddies have not lost hope and may come back to spill the dope.

For the Hiboes, Gallagher should toe the hill; 'Cause he really can throw the spherical pill.

In the opening game, he pitched three-hit ball.

To pave the way for the Oddies' downfall.

Jess Vanzant, behind the plate,

In the series is hitting .428.

A fine young catcher, whose peppy chatter

Steadies the pitcher; worries the batter.

For the Oddies, Hal Snyder will climb

the mound;

In his huge frame doth speed abound.

A brilliant, dependable, right-hand ace,

Who makes 'em look silly with his change of pace.

Leo Hibbs will don the mask;

A veteran worthy of such a task.

In the series he's setting a terrific pace

To lead the sluggers with the hickory mace.

The Hibs' attempt to make it three

Should prove a tilt worth while to see;

For it's the aim of the twirler to complete the rout.

By holding the Oddies to another shut-out.

—GEORGE R. BROWN.

BOWLING LEAGUE HERE IS OPEN FOR NEW ENTRIES

Little was accomplished at a bowling meeting in the Bristol Recreation Center Tuesday night, but the fact that all the leagues of the local association are still open for new entries was the thing of importance which must be closed at the next and all important meeting of the association in the local alleys on Thursday night.

All the unfinished business of the last meeting and all things of importance scheduled for this meeting had to be carried over again to the next meeting, due to the lack of teams or representatives of both new and old teams being present. Therefore it is hoped and urged by the officials that all captains of last year's aggregation who wish to have a team represented in the league this year, and all those new teams desiring to join the league this year should have a representative at the next meeting in which all league openings will be officially closed, in order to give the secretary time to organize each loop that it may be well balanced.

Also at the next meeting many other important things such as assessments, number of men on a team, distribution of prizes, 5 or 6 man teams, and about a banquet, are all on the schedule for discussion next Thursday night. In an effort to give as many as possible new teams, who wish to enter the league this year a chance to join, the association is trying to have at least four leagues, the Bristol, American, National and Federal; but they must be in the secretary's hands at the next meeting in order to join.

As an added attraction to bring out as many captains and representatives as possible, the Association has granted free bowling to all who attend, following the meeting. However, there will be a small charge, for the pin boys. Cards will be sent out this week to each captain of each team represented in any league last year.

PITCHERS' BATTLE HIGH SPOT IN LANDRETH GAME

Landreth Seeds lost to North City Legion 2 to 1 last evening at Philadelphia in a great pitchers' battle between Vogt and Everingham.

Dougherty for the Farmers hit the first ball pitched for a home run in deep left.

In the second inning Miller walked and scored on a home run ahead of Schoffer.

From that point no one reached third base, the Seeds getting only one more hit and the city boys three. The fielding feature was Broderick to Liberator catching Munyon off second base. Everingham got a big hand when he struck out the side in the fourth, but as Vogt was pitching almost perfect ball the Farmers lost.

Sunday at 3 p. m. R. D. Wood, of Florence will play here.

Brilliant Battery

By BURNLEY

One of the year's most phenomenal hurlers is young Monte Stratton, pitching ace of the Pale Hose.

Monte is really going through his first big league season, though he was on the Sox payroll all of last year. Illness kept Stratton on the sidelines in 1936, but he has proved to be a great investment.

A lanky, towering fellow, measuring 6 feet 5 inches, Monte bends low and tosses a semi-submarine delivery that is really a puzzle to the hitters. Behind Stratton's sensational rise is the other half of the White Sox wonder battery, catcher Luke Sewell.

This veteran backstop is one of the smartest receivers in baseball, and his knowledge of batters' weaknesses has been a prime factor in the success of Stratton, Kennedy, Lee, and other Sox slingers.

Luke may have slowed up with the years, and he isn't a great hitter, but Jimmy Dykes will tell you that his ace maskman is worth his weight in gold. Sewell is the master behind the brilliant pitching of the Pale Hose. (Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

KENT WRITES OF WASHINGTON

FRANK R. KENT

"The Great Game of Politics" is the title of Frank R. Kent's Washington articles, to appear five times a week in the Courier. And Kent makes the Great Game interesting to the average American.

Mr. Kent is one of those experts of whom it may be said that he has reached the top of his profession by the simple expedient of plugging away. He was born in Baltimore and lives in Baltimore. He was educated there, and has spent many years writing in Baltimore and Washington.

He commutes between Washington and Baltimore now, spending a part of every day in the capital, talking with statesmen and politicians, listening to Congressional arguments during the session, and drawing his own conclusions.

Mr. Kent has written about American politics for the Baltimore Sun since 1898. So much has his authority weighed, that newspaper men throughout the United States have for many years kept the Sun on their desks, to read Kent's comment.

Frank R. Kent's "Great Game of Politics" is one of the most widely quoted political commentaries in America. Read it, five times a week, in the Courier, beginning Monday.
